

Investment Event

EU and China agree investment deal

Following seven-years of negotiations, the EU and China have tentatively approved an investment deal

Market access for European companies will be improved

Chinese firms will benefit from locking in existing EU market access rights

Our views

For European businesses, the deal could mean improved access and new opportunities as well as fairer competition in China's markets

The deal also sends a strong signal of China's commitment to reforms and opening up

We remain overweight in European and Chinese equities

EU and China agree in principle an investment deal

After seven years of talks, the European Union (EU) and China have reached an agreement in principle, on investment. The Comprehensive Agreement on Investment (CAI) aims to create a better balance in the EU-China trading relationship, as the EU has traditionally been much more open than China to foreign direct investment (FDI).

Better market access and level playing field

How does the EU benefit?

According to the EU, market access for European companies will be improved by "prohibiting forced technology transfers and other distortive practices" (such as state subsidies and perceived favouritism towards state-owned enterprises). The deal also opens a route for EU to resort to a dispute resolution mechanism in case of a breach of commitments.

There are also sector-by-sector market access rights, removing requirements such as entering into joint ventures with local firms, and removing caps on levels of investment. Sectors that are set to benefit include manufacturing, automotive, financial services, telecoms, real estate and transport.

And what does China get out of it?

The EU market is already open to Chinese investment with very few restrictions. Nevertheless, the CAI will lock in existing rights and improve market access in some manufacturing and (renewable) energy sectors, albeit with some restrictions (e.g. renewables access capped at 5% of each EU member state's market, and subject to reciprocal openness from China).

Greater inward FDI into China can also boost domestic competition between firms, helping to raise productivity and innovation.

What happens now?

Both sides are now working towards finalising the text of the agreement, which will need to be legally reviewed and translated before it can be submitted for approval by the EU Council and the European Parliament. The EU is aiming for the deal to take effect in early 2022. Both sides have also set a two-year deadline for the conclusion of negotiations on an additional investment protection agreement.

Market considerations

FDI flows between the EU and China are currently a small fraction of both economies' overall GDP. So although this deal has the scope to significantly boost these flows, from a macroeconomic perspective we do not expect a major direct impact on economic growth in either region. However, the indirect impacts also need to be considered, for example the effect of greater FDI on competition and innovation in markets.

Investments, annuity and insurance products

ARE NOT A BANK DEPOSIT OR OBLIGATION OF THE BANK OR ANY OF ITS AFFILIATES	ARE NOT FDIC INSURED	ARE NOT INSURED BY ANY FEDERAL GOVERNMENT AGENCY	ARE NOT GUARANTEED BY THE BANK OR ANY OF ITS AFFILIATES	MAY LOSE VALUE
--	-------------------------------	--	--	----------------------

The deal will have important sector-by-sector impacts. China has made significant commitments on manufacturing, the most important sector for EU investment in China. Within this, European carmakers are already well established in China and account for the largest share of inward FDI. As such, these firms are well positioned to take advantage of better market access rights to gain a greater foothold in the steadily growing Chinese market.

Within the context of European equity markets, where we maintain an overall overweight position, this could see some scope for outperformance of those markets more heavily weighted to manufacturing (including autos) such as Germany.

We also remain positive on China's equities. China's economic recovery is strong and broadening out across sectors that have lagged such as services. The EU-China CAI sends a clear signal of China's commitment to greater reforms and opening up (as part of the 'dual circulation' strategy).

This deal also follows another mega trade deal, the Regional Comprehensive Economic Partnership (RCEP), that China signed with 14 Asia-Pacific nations on 15 November. Overall, these deals reduce the perceived risk of economic "de-coupling" and concerns about massive supply-chain reallocation out of China. President Xi has also indicated that China will proactively consider joining the Comprehensive and Progressive Agreement for Trans-Pacific Partnership (CPTPP).

Important information:

The contents of this document may not be reproduced or further distributed to any person or entity, whether in whole or in part, for any purpose. All non-authorized reproduction or use of this document will be the responsibility of the user and may lead to legal proceedings. The material contained in this document is for general education information purposes only and is neither intended as, nor does it constitute, advice or a recommendation to buy or sell investments, as defined by the US Securities and Exchange Commission. For individualized tailored recommendations based on your needs or objectives, please contact your financial professional directly for more information.

Some of the statements contained in this document may be considered forward looking statements which provide current expectations or forecasts of future events. Such forward looking statements are not guarantees of future performance or events and involve risks and uncertainties. Actual results may differ materially from those described in such forward-looking statements as a result of various factors. We do not undertake any obligation to update the forward-looking statements contained herein, or to update the reasons why actual results could differ from those projected in the forward-looking statements. This document has no contractual value and is not by any means intended as a solicitation, nor a recommendation for the purchase or sale of any financial instrument in any jurisdiction in which such an offer is not lawful. The views and opinions expressed herein are those of HSBC Global Asset Management Global Investment Strategy Unit and HSBC Securities (USA) Inc. at the time of preparation, and are subject to change at any time. These views may not necessarily indicate current portfolios' composition. Individual portfolios managed by HSBC Global Asset Management primarily reflect individual clients' objectives, risk preferences, time horizon, and market liquidity.

The value of investments and the income from them can go down as well as up and investors may not get back the amount originally invested. Past performance contained in this document is not a reliable indicator of future performance while any forecasts, projections and simulations contained herein should not be relied upon as an indication of future results. Where overseas investments are held the rate of currency exchange may cause the value of such investments to go down as well as up. Investments in emerging markets are by their nature higher risk and potentially more volatile than those inherent in some established markets. Economies in Emerging Markets generally are heavily dependent upon international trade and, accordingly, have been and may continue to be affected adversely by trade barriers, exchange controls, managed adjustments in relative currency values and other protectionist measures imposed or negotiated by the countries with which they trade. These economies also have been and may continue to be affected adversely by economic conditions in the countries in which they trade. Mutual fund investments are subject to market risks, read all related documents carefully. Please consider the investment objectives, risks, charges and expenses carefully before investing. The prospectus, which contains this and other information, can be obtained by calling an HSBC Securities (USA) Inc. Financial Consultant or call 888-525-5757. Read it carefully before you invest.

Investment and certain insurance products, including annuities, are offered by HSBC Securities (USA) Inc. (HSI), member NYSE/FINRA/SIPC. In California, HSI conducts insurance business as HSBC Securities Insurance Services. License #: OE67746. HSI is an affiliate of HSBC Bank USA, N.A. Whole life, universal life, term life, and other types of insurance are provided by unaffiliated third parties and offered through HSBC Insurance Agency (USA) Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of HSBC Bank USA, N.A. Products and services may vary by state and are not available in all states. California license #: OD36843. Bonds are subject generally to interest rate, credit, liquidity and market risks. Investors should consider the investment objectives, risks and charges and expenses associated with bonds before investing. Further information about a bond is available in the issuer's official statement. The official statement should be read carefully before investing. Investments, Annuity and Insurance Products: Are not a deposit or other obligation of the bank or any of its affiliates; Not FDIC insured or insured by any federal government agency of the United States; Not guaranteed by the bank or any of its affiliates; and subject to investment risk, including possible loss of principal invested.

All decisions regarding the tax implications of your investment(s) should be made in consultation with your independent tax advisor.